Beat the ATS

What is an ATS? An Applicant Tracking System scans your resume before a human sees it. Get past it and you're already ahead of most applicants. Run this checklist before every send.

- ✓ Use a single-column layout for online applications
Fancy multi-column designs can scramble in some ATS parsers. Save the designed version for email and in-person.
- ✓ Mirror the job ad's keywords — honestly
If it says "stakeholder management", use that exact phrase in your summary or skills where it's true.
- ✓ Save as PDF unless they ask for .docx
PDF preserves your formatting everywhere. Only send .docx if the listing requires it.
- ✓ Standard section headings
Use "Experience", "Education", "Skills" — not clever labels the parser won't recognise.
- ✓ No text inside images or text boxes
The ATS can't read them. Keep every word as real, selectable text.
- ✓ Spell out then abbreviate
"Search Engine Optimisation (SEO)" the first time, so both forms are searchable.
- ✓ One page for 0–8 years, two for senior
Recruiters skim for ~7 seconds. Lead with your strongest, most recent wins.
- ✓ Name the file professionally
Alex-Morgan-Resume.pdf — never "resume-final-v3.pdf".

60-second test: paste your resume into a plain-text editor. If it reads cleanly top-to-bottom, an ATS can read it too.

Your one-page cover letter

Copy this into a blank document, replace every [bracket], and you have a sharp one-page cover letter. Keep it to three short paragraphs.

[Your Name] · [City] · [email] · [phone]

[Date] → [Hiring Manager Name], [Company]

Dear [Hiring Manager Name],

Opening — hook + fit. I'm excited to apply for the [Job Title] role at [Company]. With [X years] in [field] and a track record of [key achievement with a number], I'm confident I can help your team [specific goal].

Middle — proof. In my current role at [Current Company], I [impressive result with a number]. I'm drawn to [Company] because [specific, genuine reason — a product, value or mission], and I'd bring the same [quality] and [quality] to your team.

Close — ask. I'd love to discuss how my background in [skill] and [skill] can contribute to [Company]'s goals. Thank you for your time — I look forward to hearing from you.

Warm regards,

[Your Name]

One rule: never open with "I am writing to apply for...". Lead with a result or a reason you're a fit — recruiters decide in the first line.

Three openers that beat "I am writing to apply"

"When I grew [Company X]'s revenue 40% in a year, I did it with exactly the skills your [Job Title] posting asks for."

"I've admired [Company]'s work on [specific product] for years — so the [Job Title] role feels like a role I've been preparing for."

"Three things make me a strong fit for [Job Title]: [result], [result] and a genuine obsession with [what the company does]."

How to use this kit

- 1 Start with the designed resume (page 2)
Rebuild it in Word, Google Docs or Canva, or use it as your visual guide. Replace the sample text — keep the structure.
- 2 Rewrite every bullet with the formula
Verb + what you did + a number. Steal from the before/after examples until each line proves impact.
- 3 Run the ATS checklist before you send
Two minutes here is the difference between "seen by a human" and "auto-rejected".
- 4 Pair it with the cover letter
Three short paragraphs, tailored to one company. Generic letters get ignored.

Five mistakes that get resumes rejected

Duties, not results

"Managed social media" says nothing. Numbers do.

One resume for every job

Tailor the summary and skills to each posting.

Typos & tense mix-ups

Read it aloud, then have one other person check.

A wall of text

Short bullets and white space beat dense paragraphs.

An unprofessional email

Use firstname.lastname@ — never a nickname address.

Burying your best win

Lead each role with its strongest, most recent result.
